The Lighthouse report shows the following results: * Performance score: 68 out of 100. This means that there is room for improvement to make your website faster and more responsive. * Accessibility score: 94 out of 100. This suggests that your website is generally accessible to a wide range of users, but there may be some areas that could be improved to better serve people with disabilities. * SEO (Search Engine Optimization) score: 63 out of 100. This means that there are opportunities for improvements in the way your website is optimized for search engines, which can help it rank higher in search results and attract more traffic. * Best practices score: 100 out of 100. This indicates that your website follows all the best practices for web development and design, which is a good sign that it is well-built and maintained. Overall, there are some areas where your website could be improved to provide a better user experience, attract more visitors, and ensure it is accessible to as many people as possible. It may be worth working with a developer or web professional to address these issues and make improvements to your site.
